Dear Playworks friends and family,

Every year when we prepare the annual report, it provides us with an opportunity to look back at all that was achieved as well as the areas where we met challenges. Sometimes, in looking back, it’s possible to tease out trends. As you look through this year’s annual report, the theme I’d like you to notice is all the happy kids contained. The images and numbers included in this annual report tell a very important story about how our programs transform school culture and help kids feel happy and safe at school.

But the bigger idea that I’d like you to consider in exploring our annual report is that happiness is actually a really big deal.

Thinking back over this past year and all that our staff has achieved, if there is an area where I feel like we have fallen down, it’s in not ensuring that people truly understand our impact. And this feels like a tremendous disservice to not only our staff out in the field, but more importantly to all the kids who are not getting to play because we haven’t done what it takes to change the system.

So please consider this annual report as an official announcement that I am personally committing to a more unreasonable approach to heralding the importance of play, and specifically to the impact that we have seen Playworks repeatedly achieve through both professional training and having our coaches on site at schools. In moving forward, our goal is to ensure that children all across the United States have access to healthy, daily play. Anything short of that represents a missed opportunity to ensure bringing out the best in every kid.

Thank you so much for your support of Playworks in achieving all that we have to date. And thank you for compelling us to look back at our work with an eye to both understanding and communicating our impact.

Playfully and unrealistically yours,

Jill Vialet
Founder and CEO
Our Impact is What Matters

Playworks’ vision is that one day every child in America will get to play -- every day. For almost 20 years, we have leveraged the power of play to transform children’s physical and emotional health.

Our work is to create a place for every kid on the playground to feel included, be active, and build valuable social and emotional skills. We partner with schools, districts, and after-school programs to provide a service or mix of services including on-site coaches, professional training for school staff who support recess, and consultative partnerships. Together with dedicated principals, district administrators, parents, and teachers we are building a movement for play.

Values such as respect, inclusion, healthy play, and healthy community are the backbone of this movement.

But it’s not enough to describe our work. We are committed to running an efficient, high-performance nonprofit organization focused on impact. We measure our success in decreased disciplinary incidents, improvement in academic success, improvement in school culture, and the recovery of precious teaching time. And we’ve seen results. It can be seen in the lives of more than a half million students attending 900 schools in 23 U.S. cities who now have access to safe, fun, and healthy play.

We are changing the way children interact, both in and out of school. Learn how we move kids off of the sidelines and into the action by watching this animated video.
In 2014, Playworks served more than 850 schools, reaching more than half of a million students.
